

Rocking Chair

Wood products play an important role in the many stages of your life. Whether you're a baby, a boy in grade school, or even a teenager moving out of your parent's house wood is everywhere.

Imagine a young woman holding her baby in a rocking chair while she reads him a book and thinks of how she needs to buy more disposable diapers. She smiles at blocks on the floor. She thinks how lucky she is to have a healthy baby boy and can't wait to see him grow.

Soon he is a boy in elementary school and is back in the same rocking chair being lectured by his dad. He stares out the window wishing he was outside flying his paper kite, climbing a tree, or just playing on his wooden swing set.

All grown up, the young man is moving away. He sits thinking in the old wooden rocking chair. He looks at the photographs and the old game boards that he loves so much. Then he walks on the deck and touches the old picnic table. He smiles at the memories.

Even looking through the eyes of a boy all the way through a young man you can see that wood is every where. Wood products carry you through your life. Many things are made of wood, and if we didn't have wood, none of this boy's memories would be possible.