

The Life of Forests

By Amy McGarvey

The forest is a beautiful place that we need to take care of. It makes a big impact on all our lives. It gives us a place to go when we want to get away. It gets rid of bad gases and give us oxygen. And, for me, it is a great place for my family to go camping.

Trees and forests provide inspiration and fun for people. The forests is a place where you can hike trails, go bird - watching, see animals, enjoy plants, and go swimming. I love to go camping in the woods.

The forest has trees and plants that take in carbon dioxide during photosynthesis. The trees store the carbon and they give off oxygen. If we don't keep replanting trees, we will not have a way to get rid of bad gases and we won't have oxygen to breathe.

My family loves to go camping in the woods. We have camp fires with dead wood we find. We sleep in tents under big trees and we hear the wind howl. We like to swim in the lakes and streams. It is a blast of fun for my family.

Sometimes we don't appreciate what we have until we lose it. We don't want to lose our forests because they are important to us. They give us a place to get away to and enjoy family time together. Trees take care of bad gases and give us oxygen. In a sense, trees are a symbol of life. We need to take care of our forests.
