Why I Love Trees

I think that trees are so amazing that I couldn't possibly list all the reasons why. One of the many reasons that trees are awesome is that they give off oxygen so that we can live. They make perfect habitats for animals, and they make the forest ecosystem happy. Another reason I like trees is that I can climb them with my friends and see the wonderful view. We make houses out of tree products and build fires for warmth with wood, both of those things are important too. Imagine a world without trees!

I like leaves from deciduous trees because the changing of the leaves signals that the seasons are changing. My family likes the pretty colors of the leaves in the fall, and we like to create art with them. I like that evergreen trees stay green all winter long, even while they are under a thick blanket of white snow.

In my opinion, my favorite tree product is paper. There are endless possibilities for paper. For example, I wouldn't be writing this essay without paper. My favorite authors wouldn't be able to write their books. The paper we get from trees helps us make comic books, fiction books, non-fiction books, science books, story books, dictionaries, thesauruses, and so many more. Imagine a world without books!

For these reasons, I think that trees are an awesome resource. It is very important that everyone helps protect and renew our trees for the future.
