

I need trees for a lot of different things. Trees help me in a many ways.

Paper is made from wood. I sometimes use the paper to make cool origami (the art of paper folding) items. We use it to write down our thoughts. It is also used to send messages to others. There are other uses for paper out there.

Factories use wood to make things other than regular paper. Take toilet paper as an example, and you know what it is used for. We also make disposable napkins which are used to wipe hands and messes. We have tissues to wipe noses on. This helps us keep germs away.

Wood is also a strong building material. It is usually easy to find so there is typically enough. You have to be careful though, because it is pretty flammable. For this reason it is a good fuel for a fire.

I need them.

The trees inhale carbon dioxide (what all mammals exhale), and exhale oxygen (what all mammals inhale). This means that trees help us to breathe. We have trees here to help us.

We need trees because they help us so much. I almost cannot imagine life without trees. They provide vital things for me. The trees are needed.

By, Cannon Cundick